

How can you comply with FISMA?

Attend this workshop for answers.

Focus on FISMA—Getting Beyond the Paperwork

- What exactly is the Federal Information System Management Act?
- How can you comply, and how is compliance being enforced?
- What technologies and services are available today to help you meet the regulations?

This one-day workshop has the answers you need. Hear from government experts and industry leaders—all involved in putting FISMA into action today.

The Program

Keynote speaker—“What Congress Expects”—Congressman Tom Davis, House Government Reform Committee chairman and FISMA author. Learn about FISMA, why it was developed and enacted, and what kind of congressional oversight can be expected to ensure FISMA is the tool used to manage and secure government information.

The Office of Management and Budget—A senior OMB executive will discuss the OMB FISMA guidance, the role of OMB in coordinating information management across government, and executive branch expectations on FISMA compliance.

National Institute of Standards and Technology – “The Nuts and Bolts of FISMA Compliance”—A senior NIST executive will discuss the system standards that will be set to address uniformity in FISMA compliance across government agency and departmental boundaries.

Case Studies in FISMA compliance—Two agencies will discuss their strategies for securing and managing information in compliance with FISMA in ways that satisfy the spirit, as well as the paperwork requirements, of FISMA.

Private Sector SME—“FISMA Challenges and Technologies That Can Help You Now”—Former NSA security expert and current NetSec President Ken Ammon discusses emerging vulnerabilities and challenges, and tools and technologies that can help you address them.

The General Accounting Office and Congress—“Gotcha’ or Disciplined Oversight?” Learn from senior congressional staff and GAO about the direction Congress will take in overseeing FISMA compliance, including the audit process, congressional hearings, reporting requirements, and the review process.
